

IMPORTANT: Investment involves risk, including the loss of principal. Investors are advised to consider their own investment objectives and circumstances in determining the suitability of an investment in the iShares RMB Bond Index ETF (the "Index Fund"). An investment in this Index Fund may not be suitable for everyone. If you are in any doubt, you should consult your stockbroker, bank manager, solicitor, accountant or other financial adviser for independent financial advice. Investors should refer to the Index Fund prospectus for further details, including the product features and risk factors. Investors should not only base on this marketing material alone to make investment decisions. Investors should note:

- The Index Fund aims to provide investment results that, before fees and expenses, closely correspond to the performance of the Citi RMB Bond Capped Index (the "Underlying Index"). The Index Fund invests primarily in Renminbi ("RMB") denominated bonds that are issued and settled outside of the PRC. However, the Manager may also invest in RMB-denominated bonds and other securities that are not included in the Underlying Index when it believes that so doing will help the Index Fund achieve its investment objective.
- The Index Fund may include below investment grade and non-rated securities subject to an aggregate cap of 30% at every month end.
- RMB is not a freely convertible currency as it is subject to foreign exchange control policies of the PRC government. Any PRC government's policies on exchange control and repatriation restrictions are subject to change and may reduce the depth of the RMB market in Hong Kong and the liquidity of the Index Fund. The liquidity and trading price of the units of the Index Fund may be adversely affected by the limited availability of off-shore RMB.
- The offshore RMB bond market is a relatively small and new market and makes it more susceptible to volatility and illiquidity. The operation of the market as well as new issuances could be disrupted causing a drop in the Underlying Index level and accordingly a fall in the Net Asset Value of the Index Fund.
- Currently, the exposure of the Index Fund is concentrated in the PRC and may be more volatile than funds adopting a more diversified strategy. Further, investing in emerging markets involves a greater risk of loss than investing in more developed markets due to, among other factors, greater political, tax, economic, foreign exchange, liquidity and regulatory risks.
- The novelty and relatively untested nature of the dual counter may bring additional risks for investing in the Index Fund relative to single counter ETFs. If there is a suspension of the inter-counter transfer of units between the RMB counter and the HKD counter, unitholders will only be able to trade their units in the relevant counter on the SEHK. The market prices on the SEHK of units traded in RMB and of units traded in HKD may deviate significantly due to different factors such as market liquidity, supply and demand in each counter and the exchange rate between RMB and HKD (in both the onshore and offshore markets). Not all brokers and CCASS participants may be familiar with and able to buy Units in one counter and to sell Units in the other or to carry out inter-counter transfers of Units or to trade both counters at the same time. This may inhibit or delay an investor dealing in both RMB traded and HKD traded units and the investor may only trade in one currency.
- The Index Fund is subject to tracking error risks due to factors such as fees and expenses, the representative sampling strategy adopted by the Manager and the liquidity of the Underlying bonds.
- Distributions are made in RMB only. As such, investors may suffer a foreign exchange loss and incur foreign exchange associated fees and charges to receive their dividend.
- There may be circumstances such as the revocation of the relevant market making approvals or registration or other changes beyond the control of the Manager that may result in the sudden loss of a market maker for the Index Fund. The risk of not being able to identify and engage a substitute market maker is higher than that of other ETFs that invest in more liquid securities and developed markets.
- The units of the Index Fund are traded on the SEHK. Their prices on the SEHK are based on secondary market trading factors and may deviate significantly from the net asset value of the Index Fund.

Investment involves risk, including possible loss of principal. Investment in emerging market countries may involve heightened risks such as increased volatility and lower trading volume, and may be subject to a greater risk of loss than investment in a developed country. Before deciding to invest, investors should read the Prospectus and Key Fact Statements for details, including the risk factors. Performance is calculated on NAV to NAV basis, inclusive of all transaction fees and assumes dividend reinvestment. The investment returns are denominated in base currency, which may be a foreign currency. If so, US/HK dollar-based investors are therefore exposed to fluctuations in the US/HK dollar/foreign currency exchange rate. Rates of exchange may cause the value of investments to go up or down. Investors may not get back the amount they invest. Individual stock prices/performance do not represent the return of the Fund. Investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate so that an investor's shares, when sold or redeemed, may be worth more or less than the original cost.
